

SHIRE RATE RISE

Jerilderie to share burden of rising local government costs

Jerilderie Shire Council is applying for a special rates increase which could see residents paying 20 per cent extra in general rates by 2016/17.

In its draft delivery plan meeting to be held within the next (2014/18), Jerilderie Shire said it would request a 10 per cent increase in the 2015/16 and 2016/17 financial years.

The increase must be approved by the Independent Pricing and Regulatory Tribunal and will also be put to a series of community meetings.

Jerilderie Shire general manager Craig Moffitt said the increase request was about "catching up" after 25 years of low or no rate increases being adopted.

Mr Moffitt said council would also look at cutting staff and operational costs in a number of ways to supplement the proposed increase.

All proposals are currently on public exhibition and will form the basis of a community meeting in Jerilderie next Wednesday.

It will be the first of several meetings to be held within the next nine months.

Jerilderie Shire Council believes the proposed 10 per cent increases over two years is "modest", saying it will only be added to the general rates.

"The general residential rate is $1400 a year, and the general rate is only $250 of that," Mr Moffitt said.

"It means the increase, if we are approved for a 10 per cent increase, is only $25 a year.

"Seeing into the future, we don't wish to get further behind," he said.

"Admittedly, the real effect will be on rural properties who don't have the additional rates and already get a significant bill."

"This proposed increase is about playing catch-up.

"It was 25 years ago the council chose to administer no increase to rates, or an increase smaller than the maximum allowable rate peg.

"Now, 25 years later, it means we are behind the eight-ball.

"With the diminishing income to councils, we consider this a modest rise to be able to maintain services."

Mr Moffitt said rates only produce 24 per cent of council's income, and said the increasing competitiveness for government funds places local services and programs at risk.

"Cost cutting will run in tandem with the proposed rate increases to help build council's income.

Mr Moffitt said lifeguards would no longer be provided to the swimming pool, as lifeguards are not a legal requirement for the facility. Library opening hours will be untouched, but librarian staff hours will be altered. He said only one of the two qualified librarians will be rostered on at any one time.

Council will relinquish trusteeship of both The Willows and the Jerilderie Court House, which Mr Moffitt said are rarely used and cost council a significant amount in "standing fees".

Council is also considering the long term options for the RSL Hall, in the meantime slashing the main-tenance budget of the seldom-used building.

Mr Moffitt said the planned introduction of a waste depot user charge was also being proposed to offset the costs of manning the facility.

A community meeting on these and other proposals will be held in council's Ian Gilbert Room from 7pm on Wednesday, May 21. All residents and ratepayers are urged to attend.

Mixed rate reactions

By Sophie Burge

There have been mixed reactions to Jerilderie Shire Council's proposal to increase rates above the government imposed state cap.

Council last week revealed it would need to increase rates by 10 per cent a year in 2015/16 and 2016/17 in order to maintain community assets and services.

With some residents opposing the increase and others welcoming council's commitment to maintain standards, tonight's public meeting on the increase is expected to be constructive.

The meeting will also discuss the proposal to increase income in other areas, including introducing a user pays fee at the waste depots and reducing costs by slashing Jerilderie pool lifeguard numbers and reducing librarian working hours, among other things.

Jerilderie Chamber of Commerce president and owner of Sticky Fingers Kathy McFarlane said she feels the increase is "not good for the residents".

She said such a dramatic increase, over the 2.3 per cent cap, would make it hard for a lot of people in Jerilderie.

"It's going to be another struggle for some finding the money, particularly pensioners," she said.

"They (the council) aren't doing anything for tourism, which is what our town relies on."

"I would like to see the council cut the expenditure to run the council and put the money they save into tourism for the town."

Faye Green from the Jerilderie Motor Inn said she agrees with the shire that increases are necessary to maintain a decent standard.

"Being in business in Jerilderie, I feel that things have to go up. If you want change in the town it has to happen, otherwise jobs are lost and your town dies," she said.

Jerilderie Shire general manager Craig Moffitt said the proposed increase was about "catching up" after 25 years of low or no rate increases.

He maintains the 10 per cent increase on general rates only is a modest increase, saying the average residential ratepayer would be paying an additional $25 a year.

The increase must be approved by the Independent Pricing and Regulatory Tribunal, and Mr Moffitt said the application would depend on support from the community.

Business owner and Jerilderie Shire Councillor Gaila Smith said the meeting tonight will be a good opportunity for businesses and residents to raise any concerns they have about the council's proposals.

"It will be explained by the financial people from the council exactly why these increases are necessary," she said.

"Council have gone through the budget process very seriously and responsibly and we encourage all members of the community to attend the meeting."

Tonight's meeting will be held in the shire's Ian Gilbert Room from 7pm.

Banjo, bushdance hit

The presentation of Banjo & A Bush Dance at the Jerilderie race course on Saturday night was a triumph.

It was due in no small part to the organisational skills and the hard work put in by the three-woman Four Creeks Festival committee, and their many volunteer helpers for the weekend.

The weather was ideal, the venue was perfect, and the atmosphere just right for the production of The Man They Call Banjo.

The play was followed by the bush dance.

More than 240 people came through the gates, some just to the Banjo, others only for the dance, but the majority for the entire night's entertainment.

Congratulations to the actors who told the story of Waltzing Matilda, some of whom later appeared as Cora and the Crop Boys, for the bush dance.

What a night it was for the whole family.

Kids both big and small joined in the dancing, learning the steps as they went.

It is understood that when the show finished, the party continued for some with music well into the night at another venue in town.

Winner of the raffle was Lena Brennan, and the winners of the most appropriate attire for the night were Les Hercus (stockman), Sonia Frost (stockwoman), Brooke Pitt (country lass) and

The Jerilderie Shire public meeting held in the Ian Gilbert room last Wednesday night was attended by nearly 60 urban and rural ratepayers, and councillors and staff.

Deputy Mayor Ruth McRae welcomed everyone to the meeting, with an apology from Mayor Terry Hogan.

The object of the meeting was to discuss the draft 10-year financial plan for the shire, which had been promulgated prior to the meeting.

General manager Craig Moffitt outlined all the proposals, and gave the audience the opportunity to ask questions.

The robust meeting lasted over two hours, with much food for thought concerning the future of our shire, and more work yet to be done to arrive at a consensus on a rate rise.

Cuts concern

'General unhappiness' with plans to increase rates

By Sophie Burge

waste depot model and re-moving lifeguard positions for the Jerilderie pool.

Jerilderie Shire general manager Craig Moffitt maintains the changes are necessary to ensure council can continue meeting community standards.

He said a combination of low to no rate increases over 25 years and ever reducing government funding has put the council in a dire financial situation.

It also recommended cost cutting measures which included only having one librarian rostered on at one time, introducing a user pays not whole-heartedly supported. He said the proposed increases to rates and changes to library staffing were particular sticking points at the meeting.

"Concern was expressed from the rural ratepayers that they're shouldering the burden, as the biggest financial portion of the rates comes from them," he said.

"Other planned proposals generally had support at the meeting, however concerns were expressed about reduction in staffing at the library.

Mr Moffitt said while residents at the meeting understood council's position, the cost cutting measures were public meeting because we need to reflect on consequences on the Federal Government's proposal to not index the financial assistance grants, which is one of our major sources of income.

"This will have a very dramatic effect on our ability to provide services, so we'll need to take that back to the community as well."

The proposed 10 per cent rate increase for future financial years is significantly higher than the state imposed 2.3 per cent cap.

Council must have the approval of the Independent Pricing and Regulatory Tribunal to pass on the increase.

Mr Moffitt said it would make up much of the losses, and that support from the community would help the process.

"We've been preparing for it and it will be introduced this year."

An official start date of the user pays system is yet to be confirmed. A pricing structure is also yet to be released. Mr Moffitt said as part of the new structure and government requirements, the waste depot would be managed by a council employee.

A date for the next public meeting had not yet been announced.

Shire rate proposal opposition

By Sophie Burge

Jerilderie Shire Council is not yet discounting a seven per cent rate increase from July next year, despite receiving 23 official submissions against the move.

The letters of opposition were received during public exhibition of the 2014/2015 Operation Plan, which sets in place the rate capped 2.3 per cent increase for the next 12 months.

"Before a final decision is made on rate increases to commence on July 1 2015, council community responses will be taken in to account, but said there's still time to gauge community opinion on the special rates increase.

"There's no telling yet what effect the submissions will have on council's decision on the rate increase proposal, which will take effect in July 2015," Mr Moffitt said.

"We have just commenced the community consultation required, which is be completed in time for a potential application to the minister before the end of February.

"Ratepayers should be aware that this is only the beginning of the process.

"All current and future substance Grant increased for the next three years.

"The Federal Government's decision to freeze Financial Assistance Grants will have a compounding effect on council's consideration of its income stream," Mr Moffitt said.

"Council's prime objective is that there be no reduction in service levels and asset maintenance standards, despite expected reduction in income."

Despite the submissions against the seven per cent increase, Mr Moffitt maintains that they will be necessary to ensure services can continue to be delivered.

Mr Moffitt said the rate increase would allow the council to "catch up" after 25 years of low or no rate increases being adopted.

Mr Moffitt said council is still working on a public consultation timetable to further discuss the proposed special rate increases for 2015/2016 and 2016/2017, which could see ratepayers paying up to 20 per cent extra in rates. A survey is also being considered.

Residents urged to have say on rate rise

Jerilderie ratepayers and residents are encouraged to attend a meeting in the Ian Gilberth room at the Civic Hall, on Thursday, September 25, from 7pm.

The meeting will continue discussions on the proposals in the Shire Management Plan for the next year, to increase rates and dispose of unused buildings. Feedback on the response from ratepayers to the questionnaire distributed with Council's rate notices will also be provided to the meeting. Council's viability will depend on actions taken in the next few years on financial matters.

Huge costs force Jerilderie Shire to . . .

Hand back buildings

By Sophie Burge

Jerilderie Shire Council has decided to relinquish care and control of the Court House and The Willows to ensure it remains financially viable.

General manager Craig Moffitt said both would be handed back to the Crown.

It would provide a significant cost saving under council's management plan for the current financial year.

Mr Moffitt said the decision is partly in response to the NSW Government's 'Fit for the Future' plan, which recommends local government reform.

Council is also pushing ahead with plans to demolish the under-utilised Jerilderie RSL hall as an extra cost saving measure.

"The Court House and The Willows are currently owned by the Crown and managed by council, and have not been used by the Jerilderie community for some years," Mr Moffitt said.

"Even unused, the buildings cost council a significant amount in insurance and maintenance."

Handing the buildings back means the ongoing costs to upkeep the buildings will be the responsibility of the NSW Government.

He said the government intends to sell-on the buildings, but "not for some time" due to the inability of staff to attend the sale.

Mr Moffitt said council has offered to arrange the sale on the government's behalf if the re-sale was to take too long.

He also said council intends to work with the government to ensure the Court House can be retained as a community venue, particularly considering its Ned Kelly history.

A new home for the museum items from The Willows is also being sought. The items are being held in storage.

In the meantime, council will continue with its plans to demolish the RSL hall.

"The RSL hall is one such building which has now been listed for demolition as council's preferred option," Mr Moffitt said.

"It requires significant expenditure for repairs which cannot be funded or justified. The community has indicated a broad acceptance of this proposal, understanding the need to cut costs."
