

Author name: Name suppressed

Date of submission: Monday, 4 November 2024

Your submission for this review:

We do not need land values to increase right now. It seems, hopefully, that interest rates will decrease next year so maybe we can afford to keep our mortgages. Otherwise housing pricing will continue to rise. And then, land values will decrease(also due to inflation/cost of living) but we'll be stuck in your 3 year cycle of high land valuations which don't reflect the current value, leading to more house selling. We just don't need a new (higher) valuation right now on top of all the other rises. This will just cause more misery