Submission: The city of Sydney has unique problems not affected by the suburbs.

The city CBD had millions of people each week that need to be supported with safety, transport etc. The majority of businesses in Sydney are small business and these people need to be supported with a separate council that can support them, having a mega council that spans over 100km is not going to support the city like it needs.

I do support mega councils and making major savings by blending councils however The city of Sydney is unique with its own set of problems and needs to be a separate council.
