I would like to add my support for keeping Sydney City Council boundaries as they are now. I think our Council does an excellent job of serving the residents and businesses in a fairly wide and diverse area already and there is no justification for making it any larger. They have a very good economic record and continue providing essential services while also increasing the recreational and cultural opportunities for all. Forced amalgamations will only cause disruption to our services and waste much time and energy and even finances.

With regards
