Submission: Leichhardt is a fantastic community, and could suffer a lack of local identity if its Council is merged with others. Leichhardt Council is currently financially sustainable, and provides tailored services to the area, which would be under threat if a mega-council was formed. If it ain't broke, why fix it?

I lived in Brisbane which was "serviced" by one of the biggest city councils in the world, and it is was such a joy to move to Leichhardt where there are so many more services for your dollar, and a feeling that you have individual attention. The Leichhardt Council has been responsive to my concerns about electricity stations, road surfaces, and dangerous trees. Certainly in my experience larger councils don't provide better service, and there is scant evidence of financial benefits.

Please leave this council as is.
