I strongly support the proposed increases to foster care allowances. As former foster parents and now adoptive parents, we have done everything we can to give our daughter access to every opportunity whether in education, sports, or other enriching activities. The reality is that children in care often carry the weight of trauma, and they need more support emotionally, physically, and financially. Therapy, specialist services, and a nurturing environment are essential, and that comes at a cost. By increasing allowances, we're not just helping cover expenses; we're investing in futures. Let's empower carers to provide the biggest, brightest, and best lives possible for these incredible kids. They deserve nothing less.
