With regards to the Hawkesbury Council, I would prefer the cost of extending the Sydney Water's wastewater services to the Hawkesbury area be shared among all of Sydney's Water's customers. This makes it a fair and equitable solution and does not disadvantage Hawkesbury customers. As the wider Sydney metropolitan area will benefit by Sydney Water taking over the Hawkesbury's wastewater services therefore the cost should be shared equally. If Sydney Water does not take over the assets the ramifications for the Hawkesbury residents could be disastrous. Sydney Water is also better equipped to look after and maintain the wastewater system which again will benefit the entire Sydney Metropolitan basin, not just the Hawkesbury and the costs should be shared be equally amongst everyone. If Sydney Water look's after the whole wastewater system for the entire Sydney basin why has the Hawkesbury region been left behind and left to look after itself? The Hawkesbury has been apart of the Sydney Metropolitan area for a long time and has suffered the most from natural disasters (Flooding) in recent years then the rest of Sydney Metropolitan and continues to stand as part of Sydney, so it should be looked after and treated like the rest of Sydney, not left out as the forgotten and less thought about area.
