As a more general comment I am only in favour of price increases for water if that increased revenue is allocated in a way that provides a continuing supply of clean, healthy water to our rapidly growing population over the coming decades. My first concern is that I am in favour of seeing that any future price increases for domestic water include a commitment to ensure that Sydney's desalination plant continues to operate into the indefinite future (ie, 50-100 years). Secondly, I am also seeking a commitment to greatly enhance water recycling facilities and infrastructure to the point where all new housing developments include recycled water being provided to new dwellings, whether houses, apartments or some other form of dwelling.
