Completely unreasonable to be increasing the price by at least 14% annually for households when cost of living pressures are at their worst. We are first home buyers and trying to cover a mortgage of over 1.3m (standard average for Sydney). All other costs have increased in recent months. Not only is it preposterous that the price be increased so much - but also the fixed rate? Not to mention the individual rates. Just rubbish that more costs are being added - the timing is not right and many others will struggle with this increase. Interest rates will not decrease for another year and all other necessary living costs have increased. Now water is becoming the same and being proposed for a 5 year period? Not happy and so frustrated with the cost of living in this darn city. Not worth it anymore - having to pay far more just to get water into the home
