I am not sure how any organisation can justify such a proposal. This is a poor attempt to take from service consumers and pass dividends to the government. I believe IPART is failing in its part by entertaining such ludicrous proposals. Australia seems to be the only country in the world where inactivity, loss of productivity and poor planning and management is rewarded with such high increase proposals. Any greenfields developments pay millions in levies for infrastructure which are wasted by organisation such as Sydney Water and consumers are expected to pay for their incompetence. Any other country would not entertain such rubbish as things go up by inflation as all countries increase revenue by productivity not a gift based on inflation.
