As stated, Sydney Water has been providing and maintaining Sydney's water supply needs for past 136 years, using a lot of materials that were constructed 136 years ago. To plan for the future needs for Sydney and its surrounds, some of the 136 years old water storage needs to be upgraded to maintain future performance. I've got no objection to the proposal to be implemented by Sydney Water PROVIDED that the annual increases for Water charges and usage is NOT excessive to the point that the costs penalise the Sydney Water customer aka Residential and/or Non-residential customers. As an old aged pensioner, any increase in any service (such as electricity, water & gas) can effect myself, as I only have my old Aged pension as my main source of Income, so naturally these proposed increases effects the Cost of Living parameters too.
