Sustaining Our City – Have your say about continuing the environmental levy

Randwick City Council is proposing to continue the existing environmental levy which has been funding Randwick's highly successful Sustaining Our City program for almost 10 years.

Sustaining Our City has delivered projects across Randwick City including upgrades to the Coastal Walkway in Maroubra, La Perouse and Clovelly, solar panels on community buildings, storm water harvesting in local parks and the annual the Eco-living Fair.

An environmental levy of 6 per cent of total rates was first approved by Council in 2004 and due to its success and ongoing community support it was extended in 2009.

The environmental levy is due to expire in June 2014 and Council is seeking feedback on whether it should continue for another five years.

The increased cost to ratepayers of continuing the levy is quite small as the levy is already being paid. An 'average ratepayer' (with land valued at $589,500) is currently paying $84.25 per annum (or 23c per day) towards the levy. If the environmental levy is continued, the average ratepayer would pay an average of $93.73 per year (26c per day) over the next five years.

If approved, the environmental levy will collect $20.37 million over five years to be spent on projects such as innovative technologies to save water and energy, completion of future stages of the Coastal Walkway, protection of our coast, and pedestrian and cycleway upgrades.

Randwick Mayor Scott Nash said: "Our residents have really embraced these initiatives. Protecting our local environment is something we take very seriously."

Visit www.yoursayrandwick.com.au/sustainingourcity to fill out our survey, participate in an online discussion, and find more information about the existing environmental levy. You can also read more information and fill out our survey at Council's Libraries and Customer Service Centre.

The proposal is on public exhibition from 9 September 2013 to 7 November 2013.

RANDWICK NEWS

A huge thank you to the many thousands of people who turned out on Sunday to make our ninth Eco-living Fair a spectacular success! The biggest celebration of all things green and sustainable, our Eco-living Fair has raised the bar pretty high both in terms of valuing and appreciating our environment, and in getting our community together for a great day out.

Highlights this year included Lady Sings It Better who rocked the main stage, free valet parking for bikes, scrumptious treats from the food trucks – a new addition this year – raw food and composting workshops and lots of tips on saving water and energy around your home and living more sustainably. We also had giveaways including a flashy commuter bicycle worth over $600, and vegetable box subscriptions. Council's Community Nursery came to the party too, giving away more than 3,000 native plants.

We remember

With the coming of spring, our thoughts turn to a sad anniversary our community marks each year – 12 October, the date of the tragic Bali bombings in 2002 in which 88 Australians perished, many of them members of our own eastern beaches community.

This year, as we do each year, we will gather together on 12 October at the Bali Memorial at Dolphins Point overlooking Coogee Beach, to pay tribute to lives lost, and comfort family and friends who still grieve the loss of their loved ones.

Vale Nancy Hillier

I was saddened to learn last week of the death of Botany resident and tireless environmental campaigner Nancy Hillier OAM. Our thoughts are with her family at this sad time; and she will long be remembered as champion for our local area, and an inspiring woman.

Development Applications

I believe that our residents deserve to have a say in the future of Randwick City. I also believe that by involving residents in Council's projects and plans, we get better outcomes. After all, local residents know their local streets, parks and beaches better than anybody.

As a council, we're committed to genuine community consultation. We're committed to listening to your views and we're committed to using your feedback to make Randwick City an even better place to live and work. We have a policy that makes community consultation an integral part of the way we do business.

For many years, we've used a dedicated community consultation website www.yoursayrandwick.com.au to get your feedback and ideas on Council's proposed projects and plans. Our major consultation projects are run through this website where you can participate and have your say. We read and consider everything that we receive through that website.

Most recently, we asked for comments on the proposed extension of the Sustaining Our City environmental levy which has helped fund things like the Coastal Walkway, solar panels, stormwater harvesting and the Eco-living Fair. Almost 7,000 responses have been received both online and through printed surveys. We're still going through the responses and a report and the survey results will go to a Council meeting next month.

We also run face-to-face meetings through our community-run precinct system. We have 12 local precincts and each holds meetings most months. You are welcome to attend your local precinct meeting and discuss any local matters or concerns, and Council will respond.

And we also use new technology to speak with everyone. We have active Facebook and Twitter followers and the myRandwick app where you can report problems or track DAs. Our Randwick eNews, published every Wednesday, is nearing 10,000 subscribers! Each week it's jam-packed with the latest works, events and consultations. You can sign up by going to www.randwick.nsw.gov.au/enews.

As Mayor, it's great to see a community so passionate about their local area. Thank you for your ongoing feedback on our activities. Your comments are really important and are helping shape the future of your City.

RANDWICK NEWS

When I was re-elected as Mayor of Randwick in September this year, I made it a priority to preserve Council's position as a leader in environmental initiatives.

Like many in our community, I'm passionate about our local environment. I believe it's one of our greatest assets and I'm proud that Council spends a lot of time, and resources, on protecting - and improving - our environment.

Our 'Sustaining Our City' program, funded by the environmental levy, has been in place for 10 years and has helped us deliver many projects, including upgrades to the spectacular Coastal Walkway, the installation of solar panels on community buildings, stormwater reuse, new cycling paths and community and school gardens.

With the levy due to expire in July 2014, we recently went to the local community and directly asked for your views on whether you wanted us to continue the environmental levy. Following four months of extensive community consultation, the overwhelming consensus was this: you wanted to continue the 'Sustaining Our City' program. Almost 7,000 ratepayers completed the survey with a majority supporting the continuation of the levy. Support for continuing individual projects such as stormwater reuse and solar panels was at over 80 per cent.

Last week Council resolved to seek approval to continue the levy and we will now apply to the Independent Pricing and Regulatory Tribunal (IPART). With great timing, the 'Sustaining our City' program was last week also awarded the top honour at the Local Government Excellence in the Environment Awards. That award belongs to you - the community - because of your support for these environmental initiatives.

With your continued support, we'll be able to continue protecting and preserving our previous environment.

ARE you willing to pay nearly $470 in levies over five years to fund essential building projects? This is the question Randwick Council is now asking its ratepayers.

The current environmental levy is due to expire in June 2014 and council is seeking feedback on whether it should continue for another five years.

An 'average ratepayer' (land valued at $589,500) currently pays an extra $84.25 per annum towards the levy. If it continued, the average ratepayer would pay an average $93.73 extra a year for the next five years.

MAYOR URGES PUBLIC DEBATE

Leesa Smith

RANDWICK ratepayers are being asked to fork out an average of $468 in environmental levies over the next five years.

Randwick Council is calling for residents to continue their funding of the Sustaining Our City program which has been running for almost a decade.

An environmental levy of 6 per cent of total rates was approved by the council in 2004 and because of its success and continued community support it was extended in 2009.

The levy is due to expire in June 2014, and if it continues the average ratepayer (with land valued at $589,500) would pay $93.73 per year (26c per day) over the next five years.

The average ratepayer now pays $84.25 per annum (or 23c per day) towards the levy.

If approved, the levy will collect $20.37 million over five years, to be spent on RANDWICK Council's environmental levy needs to continue.

The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change has found that sea levels could rise by 80cm by 2100.

Others are saying Bondi Beach will be narrowed by 45m as a result of climate change.

By how much will iconic Coogee Beach and the recently cleaned up Malabar Beach be reduced? How will surfing be affected at Maroubra Beach and around the world?

There will be an infrastructure cost along with the vanishing metres of sunbaking area.

Higher sea levels mean higher tides and storms breaking against our promenades, walkways, stormwater pipes and grass reserves.

MURRAY MATSON, Randwick
Greens councillor

No value for money

IN THE same week that many ratepayers would have received a letter and survey from Randwick Council about extending the environmental levy, I see its contractors are on the foreshore of Coogee beach ripping up vast amounts of vegetation and green space to be replaced with yet more concrete for the Lifesaver Memorial at a cost to ratepayers of more than $600,000. Just think how much the Coastal Walkway could have been extended by with an injection of $600,000! What's more, the extended walkway could have been in honour of the fallen lifesavers – equipped with a plaque and observation deck. What better ways to reflect upon and honour their sacrifice as you gaze out at the water.

LUKE AIKEN, Coogee

Falling golf balls in the way of quest for coastal holy grail

Heath Gilmore

Obstacles to completing one of the great outdoor walks are errant golf balls, the odd angry rifle shot and an 89-year-old woman living in a house her father built.

The 23-kilometre stretch of coastal walkway from Coogee to Port Botany is only half finished. Major impediments exist with the need to traverse four golf courses, bush bash around the Anzac Rifle Range at Malabar, and negotiate dead ends and treacherous cliffs at Lurline Bay.

Randwick mayor Scott Nash wants to spend $20 million to achieve the holy grail of an uninterrupted walkway, with rate-payers being asked to back an environmental levy to fund it.

"I am determined to complete our section of Sydney's great coastal walk," the Liberal mayor said. "The community wants it for their outdoor recreation.

"But more importantly, it showcases how beautiful our city can be."

For locals and tourists alike, taking the sea air is a Sydney rite of outdoor exultation.

Every day runners and walkers charge or amble from Bondi to Bronte, Manly to North Head or Kurnell to Cronulla. It's an experience that tourism authorities and National Parks and Wildlife Service head Ann King hope to parlay into an international drawcard. Tourism Australia has identified multi-day walks as the fastest growing area of nature-based tourism in Australia.

"Walking from Barrenjoey to the Royal National Park, which includes Sydney Harbour, is recognised as a national landscape," Ms King said.

Yet the realities of local turf wars challenge this enthusiasm.

At the northern end of the proposed Randwick council walk, the shooting fraternity refuses to vacate the Anzac Rifle Range at Malabar Headland until its landlord, the federal government, finds it a new home.

In July last year, the NSW Rifle Association won a Supreme Court challenge to stop eviction by the then Labor government to create a national park. Association chairman John Fitzgerald said the federal government had breached a 1998 licence agreement by failing to find an alternative site.

"We are happy to move for the walkers and a national park for a new home somewhere in the Sydney basin," he said. "And we have written a letter seeking a meeting with the new minister for finance to discuss this outcome."

Further south, the council has to negotiate safe access for walkers around four courses of the Randwick, The Coast, St Michael's and NSW golf clubs.

Mr Nash said that the terms of the Crown land leases guaranteed public access.

However, Kieran Semple, The Coast's general manager, said the clubs had concerns that a dedicated walkway would lead to liability claims from walkers injured by golf balls.

"It's a problem already," he said. "The council itself had a surveyor looking over the course and he was hit in the head."

The council, however, has one important person on side.

It has rezoned a South Coogee home for public recreation to allow a future re-routing of the walk directly to Lurline Bay, rather than walkers taking a detour away from the coast back up to Malabar Road.

The 89-year-old owner of the house, which was built by her father in the 1930s, can remain until she is ready to leave. The council will pay market value.

The woman declined to be identified, but said: "I am happy with the current arrangement and support the walkway.

"But I just don't want people knocking on my door, waiting for me to die, so it can go ahead."

Walk this way
Existing and proposed routes

Lurline Bay $5.5m
Houses purchased for market value to give walkers better access.
Elevated boardwalk.

Malabar Headland $3.8m
Route through national park, east of rifle range.
Relocation of Anzac Rifle Range will allow a 5km loop around coastline. Elevated boardwalks needed along parts of headland.

Golf Course route $12m
Negotiations with four courses – Randwick, The Coast, St Michaels and NSW Golf Course.
Lease agreement with federal government guarantees public access, but no readily defined and safe paths available.
Council wants to construct platforms, bluffs and screens to create paths safe from golfers.

Coastal walk to receive a $260,000 spruce-up

➔ AN UPGRADE on the Coastal Walkway at South Maroubra will provide a link between Maroubra and South Maroubra Surf Clubs.

Work has begun on the upgrade which will include a new 160m recycled plastic boardwalk, fencing works and installation of boardwalk ramps down to the beach.

The $260,000 project is funded by Randwick City Council's environmental levy.

Randwick Mayor Scott Nash expects the project to be completed next month.

"Local residents and visitors will enjoy the improvements to the coastal walkway and beach access in what's shaping up to be a great summer," Cr Nash said.

"It's my vision that soon the walkway will provide a continuous path from one end of our city to the other.

"We're working hard to complete the missing pieces, most notably at South Coogee, Malabar Headland and through the golf courses south of Malabar." The website TripAdvisor has ranked the coastal walkway as the second best attraction behind Sydney Harbour.
