

Author name: Anonymous

Date of submission: Friday, 29 June 2018

Submission: Meter installation is now taking double the time that it did previously. The process has become far more complicated, the installer that submitted the job is not always guaranteed to be the one that receives the meter to install and there is no communication from the energy company or meter company with regards to the extended delays. The previous system that was in place was far superior to the current one.

There should be no restrictions on which provider you choose. A meter should just be ordered and then you can apply to whichever one you prefer.