SOLAR FEED-IN TARIFFS 2017/18

I, and many other young Australians, support a fair price for solar residential systems. The integration of renewable energy into our grid systems is not only fighting global warming, aiding grid flexibility and security, and allowing individual initiative in community environments.

The feed-in tariff should increase in line with the wholesale price of electricity, and should be a regulated minimum rather than a benchmark. Paying solar generators less than they deserve is disappointing for a country that should be encouraging solar at every turn. Australia needs to step up on the world stage with regards to sustainability and renewable energy, and a higher feed-in tariff will support and incentivise individuals and families to get involved in the green revolution.

Don't let us fall behind!
