Submission: This is just a joke, there is no real commitment from the government for long term true recycling. The government has known for 12 months that China was closing the gate on accepting environmental waste - what was our useless government doing towards permanently FIXING this major problem - probably hoping another country will take over sorting out our garbage problem - again no real leadership. Their answer put the garbage in a really big shed - load it on a boat - send it half way around the world adding to global warming with ships burning of fossil fuels on the way - job done. Why not learn from Norway's environmental policies and make the Beveridge industry responsible for the plastic bottles they manufacture - After all they are the ones making HUGE profits out of there mostly SUGAR drinks - which is creating our epidemic of diabetes and obesity - make them responsible for there created rubbish. Governments have to grow some balls and show genuine leadership on our environmental garbage before we all die in our own created rubbish dump. England had an article on TV the other day - they have created a hi tech machine which you feed bottles in one end and is converted to saleable oil (this is true recycling) where is the money commitment from the government into research - Australia use to be the BEST country in the world for research until this medievile LNP government took away costing and funding research - there fore our brilliant research scientist had to go over seas. You don't have to be blind to not see that the government is helping their mates in the Petro-chemical industry to use virgin resources straight from the earth - there is no real money in recycling - this is the mind set of this uneducated LNP government. Use these resources to day for MY profit now - stuff our grandchildren they can go to another planet to find their own resource - I want it all now is their war cry. All forms of government local - state and federal must work together
