Submission: The real purpose of this scheme has not been revealed. The government claimed it would alleviate the discarding of containers in public area. The figures given for the number of containers processed through the scheme is mostly those which would have gone in the existing yellow bin system. The fact that all container purchasers pay the deposit (15c) but only get 10c return is unfair along with the inaccessability of return sites. The whole thing is a money grabbing con job dressed up to look like an "environmental success story". I have heard stories of the return sites turning into rubbish dumps and people going through the yellow bins to get bottles to cash in. Ridiculous.
