Of course the price for our solar energy should be fair: increase in line with price of electricity. It should also be regulated... like it is in Europe. Our family in Germany have benefited from the fair price of solar since they installed solar panels on their roofs - If it can be done there, why not here? (instead of copying USA, where big money companies are always supported!). We are retired and, more than our still working children, benefit from the solar all day, every sunny day!!! As it makes a great difference to our electricity bills, it allows us to spend more in shops - by that helping retailers!!!! Finally, I believe that if the government does not show any willingness to go the green way, the people will do it themselves - as has been the case in several areas in Australia. In this case the government will LOSE... BIG! I am not surprised that politicians cannot see that as they seem to have their eyes firmly glued to their hip pockets... and that all over the world...
