Submission: I have been a level 2 contractor for about 10 years and am now retiring . I am pleased that I am retiring now as for the past 3 years I have been mainly involved in metering changes for solar installations.

When the changes to metering came in on Dec. 2017 I feel the whole metering arrangement was nothing but a mess. Making it difficult for the contractor and the client. Too much red tape from the meter providers and from a day or two to get meters it now seems to take weeks. I have also heard many level 2 electricians are opting out because of this.

I hope you can make it better

Regards
