

Author name: R. Taylor

Date of submission: Wednesday, 15 January 2020

Submission: The much larger increase for short bus fares seems unfair and something which will reduce the use of public transportation for short distances, in favour of cars, riding, and walking.

I would argue that fares should just be a flat per kilometre price for all modes in a journey (e.g. $0.5/km), if the aim is to align bus, light rail, and train fares.