Submission: Firstly; it was with disbelief when I found out about this proposal from Solo Water Pty Ltd to discharge 160,000 litres of waste water a day into a usually dry, coastal lagoon, situated adjacent a patrolled, pristine beach in a Heritage listed town. My god, what is this company thinking? The proposed variation is a cheap, self serving option being tested by the licensee (with headquarters in QLD). The variation can not possibly comply with " the protection of public health, the environment and public safety" being the first and foremost requirement stated in the licensing agreement. There must be no discharge into the environment at all. Long term infrastructure in the way of a pipeline is required to support the scale of development (sadly) taking place in this once quiet little town.
