Submission: I believe that any fare increase for senior Australians is grossly unfair. Self funded retirees especially receive a lot less benefits for working hard and paying taxes all their lives as it is. They should be recognized as not being as much of a burden on the country as those who are fully paid pensioners. Surely, it is not too much to ask that they receive cheap transport fares at least. This will definitely adversely volunteering as self-funded retirees form the majority of most volunteer organizations. This work would save the Australian economy millions of dollars each year and there are statistics to prove this already available.
