Submission: Good morning

Sydney roads are not designed for the amount of traffic that we have and it is not unreasonable to ask that Sydney has a good and affordable public transport system.

I think that it is reasonable to stop people taking short unnecessary trips to get free trips however I do not think that those traveling long distances to work should be unfairly penalized by disproportionate fare increases. It is also good if people could be charged 1 fare to get to work regardless of what public transport they use ie bus/train.

I think that the current Sunday fare of $2.50 should remain as it encourages people who only use the trains at weekends to get out of their cars and to use public transport.
