Submission: There are a number of flaws in this pricing. How can a person traveling from Cronulla pay the same as someone traveling from Mortdale. Fares should reflect journey distance and mode of transport. It seems to me that rail fares are going to prop up the other forms of transport as 40% of travelers going to work five times a week will be paying 25% more per week, which is just criminal. Make the bonus trips go from the most expensive 8 but do not cut them out or car travel will become advantageous.

It seems that those who have paid their way will be seen as a cash cow for eternity with those on a senior card now dropped from the gold cards.

Remember those who have now just been forced onto the Opal system who have medical problems like dementia do not have the ability to tap on and off. Daily limits will impact these people dramatically, if they tap at all.
