Submission: Hello,

I think your proposal to axe the need to pay a separate fare when changing from the bus to train (or vice-versa) is brilliant.

In terms of removing the maximum 8 trips, I think more people are going to be really angry. The real reason why people take 8 short trips is because of the current high cost. Also, the people feel the need to cheat the system because you don't provide an honest way for us commuters. If you are indeed planning to remove this how about bringing back the monthly, quarterly, and yearly rates?

For me, this was one of the best features of the old system. Commuters are allowed to pay in advance and not worry about their daily commute. This will eliminate people making 8 short trips and the government can get the money in advance.
