

Author name: Anonymous

Date of submission: Tuesday, 2 February 2016

Submission: I believe that inexpensive travel has distinct benefits for the health and welfare of seniors.

1. It enables them to socialise and keep connected with friends and family
2. It enables them to work as volunteers in many organisations that can use their considerable experience and expertise.
3. Much of their other 'free' contributions to looking after friends, family members and grandchildren will become considerably more expensive and out of reach.
4. Active seniors are healthier and less burden on the health system.

Making the daily fare $9.50 is unfair and misguided.

Seniors VOTE and follow politics closely.