

Author name: Anonymous

Date of submission: Wednesday, 3 February 2016

Submission: I was shocked to read that the report is recommending that the fares which this government promised would not rise, should rise from a maximum of $2.50 per day to a maximum of $9.00 per day for retirees over age 60 years. If the government was to adopt this recommendation it would be a gross betrayal of trust. Even leaving aside the issue of trust (as governments are wont to do), such a maximum fare would be unaffordable and an unfair impost on retirees. Just because a person is a self-funded retiree, it does not mean they are rich, or that they have a large disposable income! And do not think that it is only retirees and pensioners who will consider this issue when it comes time to vote in the next state election: I think you could easily look at people at least 10 years below the age of 60 taking it into account when they make their voting selections.