

Author name: D. Downey

Date of submission: Monday, 21 December 2015

Submission: Why are we making the use of the public transport fare structure so complicated? Is the aim to make it so complicated that we need a separate infrastructure just to explain it to people? One journey = One fare. But keep the fares at a low and reasonable cost and make everyone pay. In New York a 50+ minute subway trip costs just $4 - Paper ticket less if you with a prepaid card. No one complains if the price is reasonable and everybody is treated equal. A nineteen minute ferry ride from Neutral Bay to Circular Quay costs over $6. Way too expensive if you want an equitable system. Think about it.