

Author name: D. Fitzpatrick

Date of submission: Thursday, 8 October 2015

Submission: Public transport users should not be penalised due to the mode of transport they use, since more often than not, they have no choice in the matter, and if they change modes they should not be penalised for doing so.

The pricing of public transport should encourage people to use it, not penalise them when they do. If a commuter is travelling 25km, it should be the same price regardless of what mode of transport they've chosen to use, even if they change modes at some point during their journey. Travel within the CBD should also become free, as it is in other capital cities, such as Perth and Melbourne.