

Author name: D. Kirk

Date of submission: Thursday, 4 February 2016

Submission: Regards the proposed public transport increases. The fees should be reduced for both casual and daily users as fuel cost have reduced by 30%, so why are these cost reductions not being passed on to the consumer?

Therefore, I do not understand any form of proposal to increase the present fare including for seniors where some are already struggling. Additionally doing away with the Sunday discount, as on that day I note the transport systems are full due to being more affordable, take it away and the system will be back to just a few using it as it easier and cheaper to use the car especially if it is a family.

The Sydney transport system has won awards for being one of the worst in the world because it does not service enough areas, expensive to the point it is cheaper to drive ones private car to a destination than get on the public transport system.

Make a better cheaper system and more people will use it whereas then the system may run at a profit as there will be more commuters.

By putting up the fares in most cases will have more people considering other forms of transport and truly wonder regards the management that propose these short term considerations , instead of looking at a long term plan.