

Author name: H. Britz

Date of submission: Friday, 5 February 2016

Submission: I am a senior card holder but do not hold a pension card. A change from $2.50 to $9.00 for the daily cap on public transport costs is almost four-fold and not fair. I do not use public transport a lot (like an employed person) so in effect I would be paying fares like a non-senior (I live in the inner west of Sydney). I would not be seeing the major benefit of being a senior so for me the definition of a senior would become almost meaningless.