Submission: My wife and I have worked almost 50 years each and have always supported the government with our Taxes. We have always lived frugally and saved hard so that we could survive even if the government could not afford to pay a pension. We still live frugally so that our savings will last. We are not costing the government anything in pensions and now they want to take more from those who have saved them money. I believe it is called double dipping. It is unfair to bite the hand that has fed you all these years. Please be fair to those who have helped you and let the honest seniors keep their gold opal cards.
