Submission: I am writing to protest any change in the older person's travel concession. This concession is crucial in enabling older people to move around without suffering financial loss.

The availability of good public transport is considered to be one of the main requirements of older people. Without being able to be easily and cheaply out and about, people will suffer poor health and consequent disability, both mental and physical. This will of course result in more cost for the government in the long run. Also, it's just unfair to deprive older people of easy access to friends and events which keep them in touch with our community.

Surely the aim of the government is to help older people stay active within our community. This will become considerably harder for those people with financial limitations.

Please re-consider this decision.

Yours sincerely,
Jenny De Mole
