Submission: The principle of public transport is to facilitate people to travel around at low cost; we have a system that kind of worked and just accepted by people of NSW. Public transport are mostly used by lower to middle income family, government should do everything possible to reduce the fare. Some poor people would stay home just to save money or not able to afford keep increasing fare.

Why waste money to review and change, I'm sure it is not going to be cheaper to update the OPAL system to cater the change.
