

Author name: L. LAKE

Date of submission: Friday, 19 December 2014

Submission: Hi,

Essentially the Taxi industry has never had a successful strategy to cope with peak demand times. What has happened is that more taxis are put on the road to cope with peak demand but the consequences is that when there is no demand there is no work as there are too many taxis.

One way to address this is to let UBER type vehicles operate in peak demand times and be illegal at other times. As well as get rid of excess taxis.

Any chance of this happening? Nope.

Ta
Luke Lake