

Author name: M. Byington

Date of submission: Monday, 1 February 2016

Submission: Raising the opal for seniors is a great and unnecessary hardship on our older Australians. There will be no benefit and will only make our seniors less mobile, less healthy and more depressed. I believe the present cap on public transport is one of the most benign benefits that this country provides.

Public transport, like education, libraries, health services are part of the social contract.