Submission: I am 71 years of age and, having retired 12 months ago after 32 years of working which ultimately saved the Government money due to non-payment of a pension, it would be unacceptable to increase the price of the Seniors Opal Card for retirees who are now using their Superannuation to fund their lifestyle. There is basically very little else that the Government is doing to assist this category of "baby boomers" who have worked hard and paid taxes over a lifetime of years, and the occasional use of the Opal Card is a thank you for our forethought of providing for ourselves in our retirement years. Please do not take away this small reward.
