

Author name: P. Graham

Date of submission: Tuesday, 20 May 2014

Submission: On your own website you state that feed-in tariff is lower than the cost of power because the retailers still have to cover costs, including network costs. On my account I pay over $100 for network costs (over and above the cost of the electricity), so why are the retailers allowed to double dip? I respectfully ask that the cost of networks be left out of the calculating of feed-in tariff range.