

This has to be a joke.

We the public have never been given a better service for our money yet always expected to pay more.

Where are the promises, if they break their promises, as they usually do, why don't heads roll.

I think it is about time the government started to get serious and have a good look into the families, brothers sisters cousins etc that all seem to work for city rail and make ridiculous amounts of money because they needed extra cash, so what do you know, uncle John is doing the rosters and will look after it, another couple of extra Sunday shifts and all is solved, this is corruption at its highest level.

This is your last chance cityrail, improve the service first, clean out the dead wood, cripple the inside family business that lurks everywhere in your system, show the public the results and then propose an increase and see what response you get.

Think it is time I got a company car and started driving to work.
