

Monday 03 November 2008

To Whom It May Concern

I am writing to object to the submission by CityRail for an increase in fares of up to 18%.

I live in Bondi and travel to Martin Place from Monday – Friday for work.

I believe the current cost of my weekly ticket $35 is more than enough to pay for a rail network that consistently runs late, provides minimal communication to commuters and frequently delivers dirty, non air-conditioned carriages.

I also disagree with the IPART data which 'shows' that the "average commuter household has a yearly income of $97,917" (as reported in MX). My yearly income is well below this amount and I do not believe that this number is an accurate calculation.

I strongly oppose a fair increase unless CityRail can measurably improve all aspects of its "service" and deliver a first class rail network.