

It's shocking to read about the proposal to increase the off-peak fares, citing that it would align fares with rail services in other regions in Australia. For a start, why don't RailCorp try to align the services with the services of other regions and THEN align the fares? It sounds like a more logical idea to me.

Besides, can they really match the $2.50 Sunday fares for all zones like in Melbourne?

If RailCorp really wants to increase the fares, it has to do its homework first.

Anjelita Malik