Dear Sir/Madam

at first I must inform you that commuters cannot read the submission at website announced because it is unavailable due to confidentiality. What surprice! In my opinion under existing conditions any rise of fares of public transport is not justified. I read many comments about incapable train service. I mean, the public transport must be changed completely to resolve the traffic jam on our roads. It is dear and dangerous to spent a half of live behind the wheels and inhale all this exhaust fumes. Everybody is talking about the danger of smoking cigarets but it is not comparable with danger of everyday driving a car. If the now available public transport is not sufficient, it must be done something more. Built the metro system as it is at every big city in the world !!! It will be not much dearer than all improvements of road traffic as the cross city tunnel etc. And it is quick and paying off in long term. We are not so pure country with so high budget surplus. Anyway it must begin in some time, I cannot see any other solution of existing problems.

With regards

Milena, Liverpool
