

I write to voice my objection to any proposal to increase fares on trains. I travel on the Penrith - City line, and have to put up with 30 year old k and s series cattle trucks, most of which are not air conditioned. They break down, they are dirty, seats are not ergonomic resulting in back aches on the hour-long journey, and the heat and humidity in these carriages is stifling to the point of heat exhaustion. We rarely see air conditioned carriages, or the Tangaras. Do the millenium trains even exist? Give the public something other than third-world cattle trucks for carriages, then ask us about fare increases.

Thank you.

Steven Rokobauer