

I am a regular use of city rail train service and i find another train fare increase is not justified at least not before we see noticeable improvement on the service rendered.

I have used subways in HK, Beijing and Europe. Sydney railway net work is by no means the most complex in the world as it claims to be. I can't see why our trains can't become better, with so much input of money and resources.