

Dear sir/madam

I am writing to express my concern regarding the possible price rise to bus fares. This is highly unfair and smacks of nothing more than revenue raising. The system is already unfair in that the entire Sydney city area is divided into two zones - three if extending to Broadway. This is a nonsense, as in Melbourne most of the city is treated as ONE zone. In Perth, there are free buses (Central Area Transport) that regularly commute through the CBD. Why is it necessary in NSW for the zones of travel to be artificially inflated, and then have price rises on said zones?

This is wrong.

Peter Blake